

	National Aeronautical Laboratory Documentation Sheet	Document Classification Restricted
Title : Analysis of Swarf from Fuel Pump		Document No. PD MT 8813 Date of issue: May 1988
Author(s) : A.C. Raghuram, R.V. Krishnan, S. Radhakrishnan, M.A. Venkataswamy and V. Ramachandran		Contents 1 page + 7 figures
Division : Materials Science		No. of copies: 12
External participation :		NAL Project No. MT-9-004, MT-1-167
Sponsor :		Sponsor's Project No.
Approval : V. Ramachandran
Remarks :
Keywords : Fuel pump, swarf, sliver, aluminium-copper alloy, surface characteristics.
Abstract : Samples of swarf taken from the fuel pump of an aeroengine involved in a flying accident were analysed in the scanning electron microscope. The surface features and chemical composition of the metallic particles suggest that they might have come from the fuel tank itself which is made of an aluminium alloy containing copper, manganese and iron.		